L. Working in France During and After Studies

ESSENTIAL KNOWLEDGE

- Students on the VLS-TS visa can work part-time while studying, while students on the VLS-T (temporary visa) or in France for short-term programmes of less than a year cannot.
- Students from the EU/EEA and Switzerland can work with no restrictions during and after studies.
- After their studies, bachelor's, master's and doctoral students can stay in France if they receive an offer for a job that pays at least 1.5 times the minimum wage salary in France.
- If they do not have a job offer, students with a master's degree or other approved degree can apply for a residence permit allowing them to remain in France for a year to look for work or start a business. While they have this residence permit, they are permitted to work part-time (up to 60% of full-time hours).
- Eventually there are opportunities to transition from "student" permits to "employee" permits allowing non-EU students meeting set conditions to remain in France to work and live.
